ABNA Expert Review: “This excerpt certainly hits the ground running. From the opening scene the plot moves at break neck speed from one scene to the next. Probably the quintessential 21st century book; don't give your readers a chance to put it down kind of works.

There is a wit and a cynical humor in this story that really appeals to me. I couldn't help but laugh out loud a couple of times which is an achievement in and of itself. The humor is self deprecating. I feel the author has looked at things in their life and said "this is just absurd and people will find this funny as well". I really like that about this excerpt.

The only problem I see is the speed of the story actually detracts from the characters a little bit. It moves so fast that it's like trying to get to know light poles while you're doing 90 on the interstate. The thing is the characters are interesting and very appealing. Their interaction with the main character is also endearing, but just going on the excerpt I don't know much about the main character.

I really like the fact that the author tries something a little different with the time line. This really moves the story along, and allows the author to keep each scene fast paced.

I really enjoyed this excerpt, and I would like to read more of this work. It seems like a really funny and entertaining work.”

ABNA Expert Review: “Tildy is a well-crafted character with a lot of sarcastic spunk. Her misadventures will surely entertain her audience, spark much laughter, and yield insights into the terrifying prospect of growing older.”
